

FUNERAL PLANS NOT ANNOUNCED

Body of George W. Vanderbilt
Probably Will Be Taken to
New York for Burial.

NO DECISION BY FAMILY

Interest Centres on Effect of His Death Upon Immense Estate at Biltmore.

Washington, March 7.—Arrangements for the funeral of George W. Vanderbilt were delayed today, pending conferences between his brother, Frederick W. Vanderbilt, and other members of the family. Efforts were being made to communicate with William K. Vanderbilt, who is abroad. It is regarded as probable that the body will be taken to New York and buried in the old Vanderbilt estate on Staten Island.

Much interest centered about the effect of Mr. Vanderbilt's death upon his immense estate at Biltmore, N. C. No information was forthcoming at the Vanderbilt home here as to plans for the future of the property, and it was not known whether the widow would continue to make her home there.

Mr. Vanderbilt died at his residence here yesterday, less than an hour after he had been reading newspapers in bed and conversing with his wife. He appeared to be in good condition, considering loss of strength from a recent operation. During the conversation he asked Mrs. Vanderbilt to get him a glass of water and another newspaper. When she returned from her errand she found him unconscious. He died within the hour.

The immediate cause of death was a blood clot that clogged arteries of the heart. About ten days ago Mr. Vanderbilt underwent an operation, the nature of which was not revealed. Reports from his physicians had been cheering, and it was said on Wednesday that he was strong enough to sit up in bed. Mrs. Vanderbilt, who was Miss Edith Dresser, of New York, was absent from the city at the time of her husband's sudden death. She had been continually in attendance at his bedside since the operation.

Want Burial at Biltmore.
Asheville, N. C., March 7.—The vestry of All Souls Church, Biltmore, of which George W. Vanderbilt was a member, has made a request of the family, it was learned today, that it remains to be interred under the chancel of the church here.

If this request is not granted and the body is taken to the family burial grounds on Staten Island, the funeral services will be conducted here at the same hour and on the same day that they are conducted in New York. Mr. Vanderbilt took an active part in the church and the church which he built and maintained, paying all salaries. Contributions taken in the services were in whole to charities and missions.

These associates here of Mr. Vanderbilt state, without having definite knowledge of the provisions of the will, that Mr. Vanderbilt has made provision for the maintenance of the church and the care of the Memorial Hospital, which he built several years ago. It is understood that Mr. Vanderbilt has made provision for the maintenance for the estate here. The estate on which is situated one of the finest country mansions in the United States, costing over $5,000,000, is said to be a success now as a business venture. Mr. Vanderbilt having made it such through his own business ability and personal oversight.

Disposal of Art Collection.

New York, March 7.—It has long been understood in art circles of New York City that George W. Vanderbilt, who died in Washington yesterday, intended to leave to the Metropolitan Museum of Art the splendid collection of modern paintings gathered by his father, William H. Vanderbilt. The collection comprises 135 pictures, bought between the years 1868 and 1885, many of which now are priceless.

The sum of the collection—one of the best known pictures in the world—is Millet's "The Sower."

Unusual interest will be manifested at this session for the reason that the general theme for consideration will be "Vitalization," which means the correlating of the school with actual life. DISSENSIONS MAY END LEADERSHIP OF PANKHURSTS

Members of Family Are paign Method.

SYLVIA HOLDS OUT FOR MILITANCY

Christabel Anxious to End Long
Exile in France, but Can Return to England Only When She Discards Extreme

Principles of Violence.

London, March 7.—Dissensions within the Pankhurst family threaten to end the leadership of the militant suffragette army, according to assertions by some of the younger members of the organization—known formally as the Women's Social and Political Union. It is said that the dissensions are rife in the inner circles of the union, and that the outcome may result in crippling the elaborate campaign which the war cabinet of the militant organization had planned for this year, at the same time ending the sway which the Pankhursts have exercised over the society since the Pethick-Lawrences were forced out of its ranks last year.

It has become an open secret that Christabel Pankhurst, a widow, and her long exile in France, for she knows that her mother is not well enough to take up the arduous duties of commander-in-chief, and it is even doubtful if Mrs. Pankhurst is able to return from Switzerland for several months. Christabel knows that she can return to England as a free woman only on condition that she discards the extreme principles of militancy, of which she has been chief exponent. She is said to believe now that such militancy has run its course and that the future appeal must be made on moral grounds.

Sylvia Still Militant.
Sylvia Pankhurst, a later recruit to the militant life, is not yet ready to abandon it as a lost cause, and she is particularly anxious to test her belief in a revolution with her sister and what promises to be a brain in the autonomy of the society. Sylvia does not believe that the government will give the vote until the country is on the verge of revolution, and she believes that she can start the revolt in the East End. Other leaders share her belief in a revolution, but they are not at all sure that once started it could be controlled in favor of votes for women. They prefer their own elaborate schemes for making the lives of public men uncomfortable, and while not objecting to violence, prefer to keep it as within their own hands.

The failure of the Pankhursts to give the forward command for this new plan of campaign has made several members of the war cabinet restless, and the overthrow of the Pankhursts triumvirate may be imminent.

In spite of the peaceful attitude of the Women's Social and Political Union, the destruction of property continues, and the fear is now expressed that the organization has lost control of its more desperate members. Among the latest sufferers from the activities of the firebrand type of militant is Mrs. Archibald Mackintosh, who has been making severe attacks on Christabel Pankhurst in her paper, Mackintosh's Weekly. No sooner was her intention of attacking the militant movement made known than some of her down, with the loss of some of her most precious possessions. Since the burning Mrs. Mackintosh has received many threatening and abusive letters, many of which she has published in her paper. Mrs. Mackintosh is an enthusiastic suffragette and has often expressed her sympathy for the heroism and suffering of the militants.

Art of Substitution.
The latest development of suffragette militancy is the art of "substitution." Militants who are assigned to political meetings and to get in a word for suffrage are being coached in the new art, the chief feature of which is a readiness to throw arms and legs around a chair or pillar in such a way that it would take a small army of ushers or policemen to pry the disturbers loose. The system worked well on its recent trial at a meeting addressed by John Burns in Streatham until the head of the local government board ordered the stewards to remove the chairs as well as their occupants from the hall.

The labor party, which, in spite of its advocacy of equal suffrage, is being attacked because of its alliance with the Liberal government, has hit upon a novel plan to meet this latest move of the suffragettes. Husky women stewards are being employed to deal with the interrupters, and, as one labor leader explained, the plan is a distinct success, because, on account of a subtle point of militant psychology, the sense of martyrdom is less comforting when one is elected by a member of one's own sex. At a recent demonstration the militants acted despatchingly: "Why don't you send your men to put us out."
